The Sinking Fund

IN DECEMBER, 1956, THE NAtional unemployment insurance fund totaled $929 millions. By March 31, 1960, it had dropped to $360 millions. And this alarming decline occurred even after contributions to the fund from employers and workers' had been increased last year by $78 millions.

The high unemployment of the last year or two has drained the fund so rapidly that it cannot sustain the existing rate of payments to the unemployed much longer.

As Mr. Paul Martin said in Parliament the other day: "If we are confronted next year with anything like the kind of unemployment we have had this year then it will mean that there will not be enough money in the fund to provide the assistance which has been contracted out to the contributors to the fund

This is merly to say, in parlia-mentary language, that the fund will go broke unless the drain on it declines or, alternatively, contribu-tions to it from employers and workers are increased. Mr. Fleming says the fund will be balanced during June-contribu-tions will be as large as expenditures, or larger. But June is one of the most active months of employment when the fund should be putting on fat, so to speak, against less active months of next

The greatest domestic question

The greatest domestic question in Canada today is whether the unemployment problem can be solved by our existing methods.

Parliament continues to debate that question week after week, with indifferent results. The Government keeps insisting that the problem will cure itself as the nation's economy continues to prosper in total, while the Opposition believes that no prospective growth in the gross national product can mop up the pools of unemployment in some areas, especially the Maritimes and Quebec.

divided) there remains the specific problem of the unemployment insurance fund.

Considering it recently, the Canadian Labor Congress proposed that the period of benefit payments be detached completely from the number of premium payments made by the worker while employed. More over, the Congress urged, benefits should be paid so long as a contributor is out of work.

In other words benefits would no longer be insurance by any definition. The fund would become simply an open-ended welfare system fine the African jungle, attiring him ideal rather than a reality. It was just a self in white tie and tails for his lonely pleasant myth to exemplify a state of nanced by the employed workers and the employers.

They could hardly support the present rate of depletion for long and would then turn to the state for some measure of adhelp. Instead of an insurance system on a sound actuarial basis we would have a gigantic system of Certainly unemployment insurance as such is no cure for unemployment. It is only a palliative to sustain the unemployed until they can find jobs, a payment to them out of money which they, and the employers, have already provided by their contributions.

While new policies will be needed to cure unemployment, it would be folly to destroy the actuarial oundness of the insurance fund. Moreover, the Government should proceed with greater energy against hose who are obtaining benefits llegally, as many are, according to Mr. Richard Thrasher, parliamentary secretary to the minister of labor. ### No Supervision

The man who would dress for dinner in the jungle, or in a dinghy in mid-Atlantic, could be expected to preserve his other personal characteristics de-spite adverse conditions. He would be good even though no one was watching. Isn't that the very quality which the toole world needs today?

All the problems of disarmament inspection, nuclear test control, secret treaties, cheating on exams, defaulting on contract standards, practising deception in international trade, rooking the public in "big deals," deceiving tele-vision audiences, cooking the books, advertising fraudulent claims — all these would very likely disappear overnight if affairs were run by people who are good even when no one is watching. It might be worth a trial, anyway, yen if we only began by wearing dark blue suits, and worked up to formal dress by degrees.

Our wardrobes, and our moral fibre, probably couldn't stand a sudden full change.

Another Look Again?

I have been surprised by the lack of discussion on the proposed million-dollar parking building on View Street. I am aware that the promoters claim that it will "cost the taxpayers nothing." Old-time residents have had ample experience with such statements; note the grain elevator, the woollen mill, the cold orage plant and the arena, just to mention a few.

Real progress comes from making experiments, so why not do as other cities in Canada and the U.S. are doing? Close off a few blocks of a street temporarily and make a "mall". Ottawa is t that and I for one feel that we could learn from their experience.

Our downtown traffic problem could greatly eased by permitting left turns at the traffic lights as is done in most other cities on this continent. Douglas Street is one of the widest business streets in most Canadian cities, and could easily handle the left turn traffic is now very unnecessarily diverted to Broad and Government Streets.

If we cannot afford to paint lanes on our downtown streets, as is done in practically all other cities and towns, this city could, at a very small expense, put in stub (short) lanes at intersecns and thus speed up and facilitate

The City Hall informs me that over 60 business licences have been cancelled so far this year. I fear that the 10-cent parking fee will keep other people away and cause more business failures.

Also, why not compel all downtown ops, banks and office buildings to shops, banks and office buildings to provide parking space for their own cus-tomers as is done in many cities and towns. His prolonged fury against Mr. Eisenhower personally must be related di-rectly to the size of his investment in the personality of Mr. Eisenhower.

Mr. K. had done something which is, un-Marxist, something that no other Communist leader has ever done before. He had staked his prestige upon the personality of the anti-Communist head of an anti-Communist state, a deeply conservative General presiding over a highly capitalistic administration.

After the U-2 affair-when the President had justified the overflights as necessary national policy—Mr. K. was in a position which is intolerable for a dictator. He had been made to look ridiculous, gullible, and weak, in the presence of the Communist world.

Accordingly, I do not share the view of those who say that the U-2 was of those who say that the U-2 was merely a pretext, that the Western decision to stand pat in Berlin, was the real reason why Mr. Khrushchev broke up the summit meeting.

For him the U-2 affair was a fa more serious threat to his power and his prestige than would have been an inconclusive negotiation about Berlin followed by an agreement to continue the negotiation at another summit

Horns of a Dilemma THE RIOTING IN JAPAN which has cast uncertainty over the forthcoming visit by President Eisenhower poses an embarrassing diplomatic problem. To cancel the visit would imply official United States doubts that the Kishi Government is able to control the domestic situation and guarantee the safety of a visitor. This would constitute not only an international slight, but a serious domestic setback for Prime Minister Kishi who now is under fire from leftist elements because of the new U.S.-Japan security alliance.

On the other hand, to go through with the visit, as is now apparently the intention, is to lay Mr. Eisenhower open to the possibility of insúlt and even physical injury. This could result in a severe rupture of friendly relations between the United States and Japan, and undo much of the progress that has been made in the postwar years.

It has been emphasized by some of the rioting elements, particularly cessive violence.

The Japanese Government, particularly, is in a sorry position, with the Prime Minister besieged in his own home. It is to be hoped that in the week elapsing before the visit some moderation of temper will take place in Japan. In any case, neither the President nor the Prime Min-

But Tony Hancock is quitting while he's ahead - away ahead of any other TV comic in this Beyburn country. He's going for bigger, international market.

Associated British Pictures have signed him up for three movies and the deal is that they will release him for television only when they feel like it, which, they add, isn't we things have made Hancock's name with British televiewers. First, the down-to earth warmth of his humor—a sort of English Jack Benny, the poor bloke every-body else is always scoring off.

And secondly, his brilliant foil-Sid James, the craggy-faced Cockney who is in truth a South African.

Surprise to the public here is that Han-cock isn't taking Sid James with him into movies and there are predictions that maybe he'll come a cropper without him.

Sidney, though hurt at the brush-off, is not worrying. You've seen him in dozens of British film comedies—he's made over 150 movies—and he eats more regularly than any other British supporting player.

Like Liberace, British Adventure writer Alistair Maclean laughs all the way to the bank. Each new novel he writes is greeted with scathing reviews here—but the money rolls in from film rights, Saturday Evening Post serialization, etc., etc.

Sample greeting of his latest book, "Night Without End," in the Dally Mail: "Alistair Maclean's newest is ham-handedly awful . . . Characters hiss at each other, the wind hisses over the snow, the lamps hiss. When the hero looks at the air-hostess his breath is indrawn—with a hiss. Everything in this book is labelled Hiss and Hers."

RAWLINGS DIED NEAR WRECK

Tragic End To Long Island Hunt

searches ended over the weekend with discovery of Cecil Rawlings' body beneath a leaning windfall in the wild Nitinat Valley where breadwinners of three families lost their lives One of Vancouver Island's most hectic wilderness families lost their lives.

It was found only about 300 feet beyond the spot where his camera was discovered on a steep mountain slope a week

The 48-year-old Victoria businessman was mortally injured in the crash of the Seabee amphibian that killed his business partner, May 29.

HEAVY UNDERBRUSH

He apparently lived only long enough to drag his mangled body about 1,500 feet dense underbrush covering the ragged slope leading to Hobiton Lake, about 70 air miles northwest of Victoria.

It was not certain whether he lived through the first night following the crash which smashed the right side of his head, caused stomach injuries and broke an arm and a leg.

A post mortem was scheduled to try and unravel some of the questions which had searchers puzzling over conflicting clues indicating both that he died in the crash and that he survived it.

The body was located by a Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry private about 3.30 p.m. Saturday during one of the last planned sweeps by ground searchers.

It was about 40 yards higher up the slope than the camera, indicating that possibly Mr. Rawlings realized he had been crawling towards seldom-visit-ed Hobiton Lake and tried to get back over a ridge that separated him from Nitinat Lake where lumber camps and Indian villages are located. FUNERAL TUESDAY

Funeral service for Mr. Rawlings was scheduled for 3 p.m. Tuesday in McCall Brothers' funeral chapel. Cremation will follow.

The reason I was lying in bed, it is the time-honored privilege of the wage slave to sleep in on a Sunday morn-

The reason I was thinking about silence, there wasn't any.

Across the street, childish voices were raised in play, thusly: "G'wan home to yer mother, you sissy cat," and "Bawww waw boohoo," followed by completely unintelligible screams.

play in the street. They can't stand them in the house, Then I suddenly realized, it was quiet. The children had disappeared in the distance, and I rolled over, ready for sleep, when . . . . Tires screamed as a car roared around the corner, its muffler popping like corn in the oven.

As it pop-popped away into the distance, a bus braked to a stop, and its doors wheezed open asthmatically. Then its motor revved up.

So there I was, lying in bed on Sunday morning, thinking about silence, and wondering what silence was really like. And remembering the Robert W. Service definition "silence you most could hear," and remembering a night spent in a sleeping bag on a rocky bluff with only the gentle wash of waves far below, and the occasional cry of a night bird, to break the calm.

And so I thought about silence one of the neighbors.

And as I thought about silence, one of the neighbors started up his power mower, which startled a dog into a barking spell, the record player down the street gave out with rock and roll, my cat jumped up on the bed and loudly demanded her breakfast, and church bells started ringing all over the city.

Outside of that, I had a pleasant time, lying in bed

Mining Tax Law Ruled Invalid The B.C. government today

lost an estimated $500,000 yearly revenue when the Su-preme Court of Canada nulli-fied its Mineral Property Taxarion Act.

The court ruled the act invalid and unconstitutional on the appeal of two firms which have been mining on Vancouver Island and Texada Island. Mines Minister Kenneth Krernan said the act was not aimed at halting export iron cte to Japan and West Germany, as claimed by Texada Mines Ltd. There is no re-finery in B.C. for iron ore. the Supreme Court judges disagreed. They said the act was "obviously" de-signed to "either impede or render impossible from a busi-ress standpoint the export of the ore or concentrates produced from the only iron mines in the province."

Anti-Combines Report Issued

OTTAWA (CP)-A federal combines report gave strongly-worded advice today to one sector of Canada's automobile insurance business to abandon its system of compulsory uniformity in insurance premium rates.

The report by the restrictive trade practices commission said there is a "distinct pos-sibility" that this practice may be a breach of the combines

Justice Minister Fulton, in making the report public, gave no indication of any immediate legal action, But he said that the relationship of "certain practices" to the anti-combines law will be reviewed again after the insurance companies have had time to consider their position.

The commission also advised rate-setting associations to consider ending the practice of setting fixed rates of com-mission for insurance agents of member companies

EXTENDED INQUIRY

The bulky commission report, signed by chairman C. Rhodes Smith and A. S. Whiteley, is based on an exended inquiry by the justice department's c o m b i n e s branch. The inquiry, which ended two years ago, made a detailed study of the auto insurance business in the 1950-52 period. It dealt mainly with the activities of so-called "boards" which fixed mini-mum premium rates for their member companies in various areas of Canada.

Named in the report were: in hospital today.
